South Asia: Maurya and Gupta

East Asia: Qin and Han Dynasties

SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES IN POLITICAL STRUCTURES

SIMILARITIES

- Brainstorm!
- What are some political similarities that you can see across the classical civilizations?

Government: similarities

- Usually one king/emperor/priest-king
- Law code that applies to all people
- Wars over expansion
- Power determined by wealth or birthright

The exceptions!

PERSIA (KIND OF)

Greece and Maya

Greece and the Maya were broken up into city-states.

In the Maya, a leader of one of the city-states could conquer nearby city-states and lead the region. This is similar to...

Greece and Maya

Greek city-states were isolated (due to mountains!), →
less conflict

Mayan city-states experiences more conflict due to more interaction with each other

Greece

Greece was a collection of city-states (the Greek word for city-states is polis)

TYPES OF GOVERNMENT IN CLASSICAL GREECE

Tyrant

- A tyrant is a leader who seizes power without the legal right to do so
- And does so by appealing to the poor and unhappy

(Some tyrants are bad.)

(But some tyrants are good.)

(And sometimes historians disagree over the goodness of tyrants.)

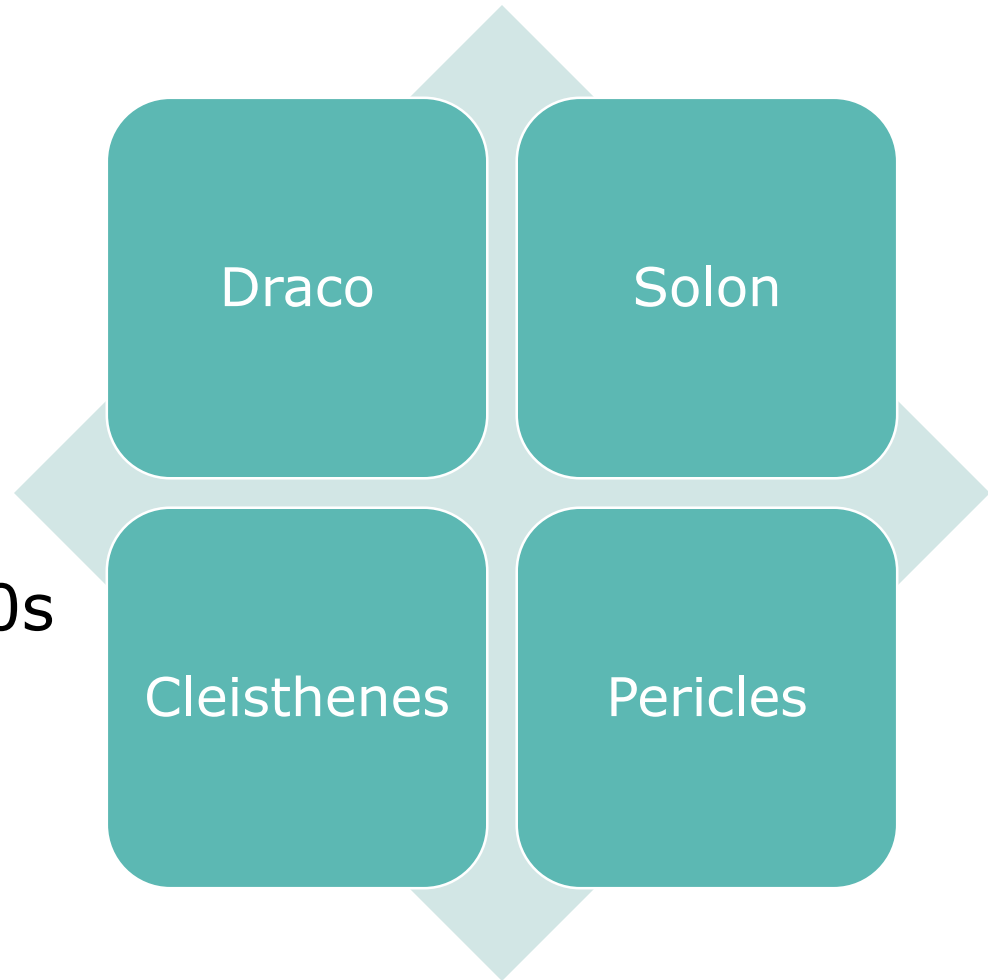

QUICK DISCUSSION

- Which type of government is the most effective?
 - Monarchy – Aristocracy – Oligarchy – Tyranny
- Take one minute to decide which you think is the most effective at maintaining and improving a civilization. Be able to justify why your choice is correct.
- Share with a partner! Argue (respectfully)!

ATHENS AND ATHENIAN DEMOCRACY

- Democracy
 - Demos ("people") + kratein ("to rule")
- Democracy developed through various reforms over 200 years (circa 620s BCE-420 BCE)

BEGINNINGS OF DEMOCRACY

- Created in response to aristocrats' fear of a revolution by the people* > created a limited democracy where:
 - All Athenian citizens could participate in government.
 - But... only 1/5 of Athenians were considered "citizens."

peasant revolts are the real deal, y'all*

DRACO – 621 BCE

- Athenian noble
- Credited with putting down first written laws of Athens
 - Severe law code
(modern English term draconian meaning “severe” or “harsh”)
 - Written “in blood, not ink”

SOLON – 594 BCE

- Rewrote Draco's laws
- Helped the poor
 - All citizens could participate in the legislature
 - Limited amount of land a person could own

CLEISTHENES – 508 BCE

- Created Council of 500
 - Created and administered laws after they were approved
- “Executive power” branch
 - Ten generals called strategi
 - Elected for one year
- Citizenship granted to some former slaves and immigrants
- Ostracism
 - Names written on ostrakon (piece of broken potsherd) once a year
 - Most votes = ten years of exile

PERICLES – 461-429 BCE

- “Golden Age of Pericles” – 461-429 B.C.E.
- Repeatedly elected as a strategus
- Paid people for government service

ATHENIAN DEMOCRACY: ITS FLAWS

- Athens' adult population: around 300,000
 - 150,000 foreigners and slaves (not citizens)
 - 110,000 women, children
 - 40,000 male citizens with voting rights
- Direct democracy – the citizen had to be there to vote (typically 5,000-6,000 voted at a time)
 - Women had few rights and opportunities
 - Slavery played a major role in the economy
 - Orators often used forceful and coercive language, rather than logic, to sway voters

QUICK DISCUSSION

- Is there a downside of a direct democracy?
- Is there a downside of democracy in general?

Roman Republic

Agenda -9/13

- Notetaking!
 - I'll give you a copy!
- Classical Civilizations: compare and contrast!
 - Today: political! And conflict!
- Homework: none 😊

ROMAN REPUBLIC: POLITICAL

Government – everyone is elected!

TWO CONSULS
(monarchical)

- Had to agree on decisions
- Served one year – and could not be elected again for 10 years

SENATE
(aristocratic)

- Patricians
- Pass laws
- Gave advice to consuls
- Influential – ended up controlling much of the republic

ASSEMBLY
(democratic)

- Plebeian representatives called “tribunes”
- Appointed to give the lower class a voice

In times of crisis, the consuls would nominate a person to become dictator. His power lasted six months.

ROMAN REPUBLIC: POLITICAL

- Law code = Twelve Tables
 - Publicly displayed in the Roman Forum – Rome's public meeting place

The Twelve Tables

 - ✦ Start to view themselves as a united Greece and not only independent poleis
 - Delian League
- Persia does not collapse – it just doesn't conquer Greece
- Leads to the Golden Age of Greece and the height of Athenian power
(and then Alexander the Great conquers everyone)
